Susan Abramovitch is one of the world's leading entertainment lawyers. She is a Toronto-based Gowling WLG partner with a practice covering transactions and disputes in the music, film, television, live theatre, multimedia, videogame, sports, branded entertainment and book publishing industries.

As head of the Gowling WLG Entertainment Law Group, Susan leads a team that is frequently sought by both Canadian and international clients to advise on a full range of business and legal issues affecting the entertainment industry, from acquisitions, standards and development to licensing, distribution and litigation.

Susan is consistently ranked as a top lawyer by her clients and peers in national and international prestigious guides. She received a Lexpert Zenith Award in recognition of her leadership and expertise, and has also been named one of Toronto's 50 most influential people by Toronto Life magazine. Susan previously practised law at Debevoise & Plimpton in New York and Paris.
